

Review by: Robin Snodgrass
Blue Ribbon Rating 5 out of 5

Amara Fen Ziel of the Shifterai people is extremely wary of mages. After all, mages are responsible for chasing her and her sister Arora out of their homeland. After running for so long, Amara has trouble trusting anyone. Nevertheless, Amara is finding it especially difficult to resist the charming, enigmatic Trevan of Nightfall. However, she wonders if she can trust him with her most fiercely guarded secret.

Fifth born Trevan of Nightfall is determined to capture the pretty yet prickly Amara since she is his destined mate. Before the brothers' exile to Nightfall Island, Trevan was well known as a charismatic ladies man. Women have always fascinated him but none so much as Amara. She is fierce, proud, and protective of those she loves. Trevan is determined to become a member of her short list of loved ones. Can he overcome Amara's distinct distrust of anything magical? Will Amara find her soul mate in a man who must use magic to shape shift, an ability she was born with? Can two vastly different people find enough common ground to forge a bond foretold by destiny?

Jean Johnson has done it again! THE CAT is the fifth book in the Sons of Destiny series. Johnson deftly crafts a mesmerizing world that gets better with each successive novel. I am completely captivated by this superbly written series about eight brothers, four sets of twins, whose destinies are foretold by a Seer many years earlier. Because of this foretelling, the brothers are exiled to Nightfall Island. Each book tells the story of one brother and his destined bride. Every brother has a unique and compelling personality. It is impossible not to fall in love with each and every one. Trevan's infectious personality and zest for life are especially impossible to resist. Although Amara comes across as prickly and a bit snobbish at the beginning of the story, she found a place in my heart by the end of the book. In addition, I often found myself laughing aloud at the interaction between Trevan and Amara, especially their extremely entertaining quarrels. I highly recommend that you rush out and buy a copy of this enchanting book. I also urge you to buy the rest of this enthralling series. You will not be disappointed because Johnson always delivers an exciting story filled with love and laughter!